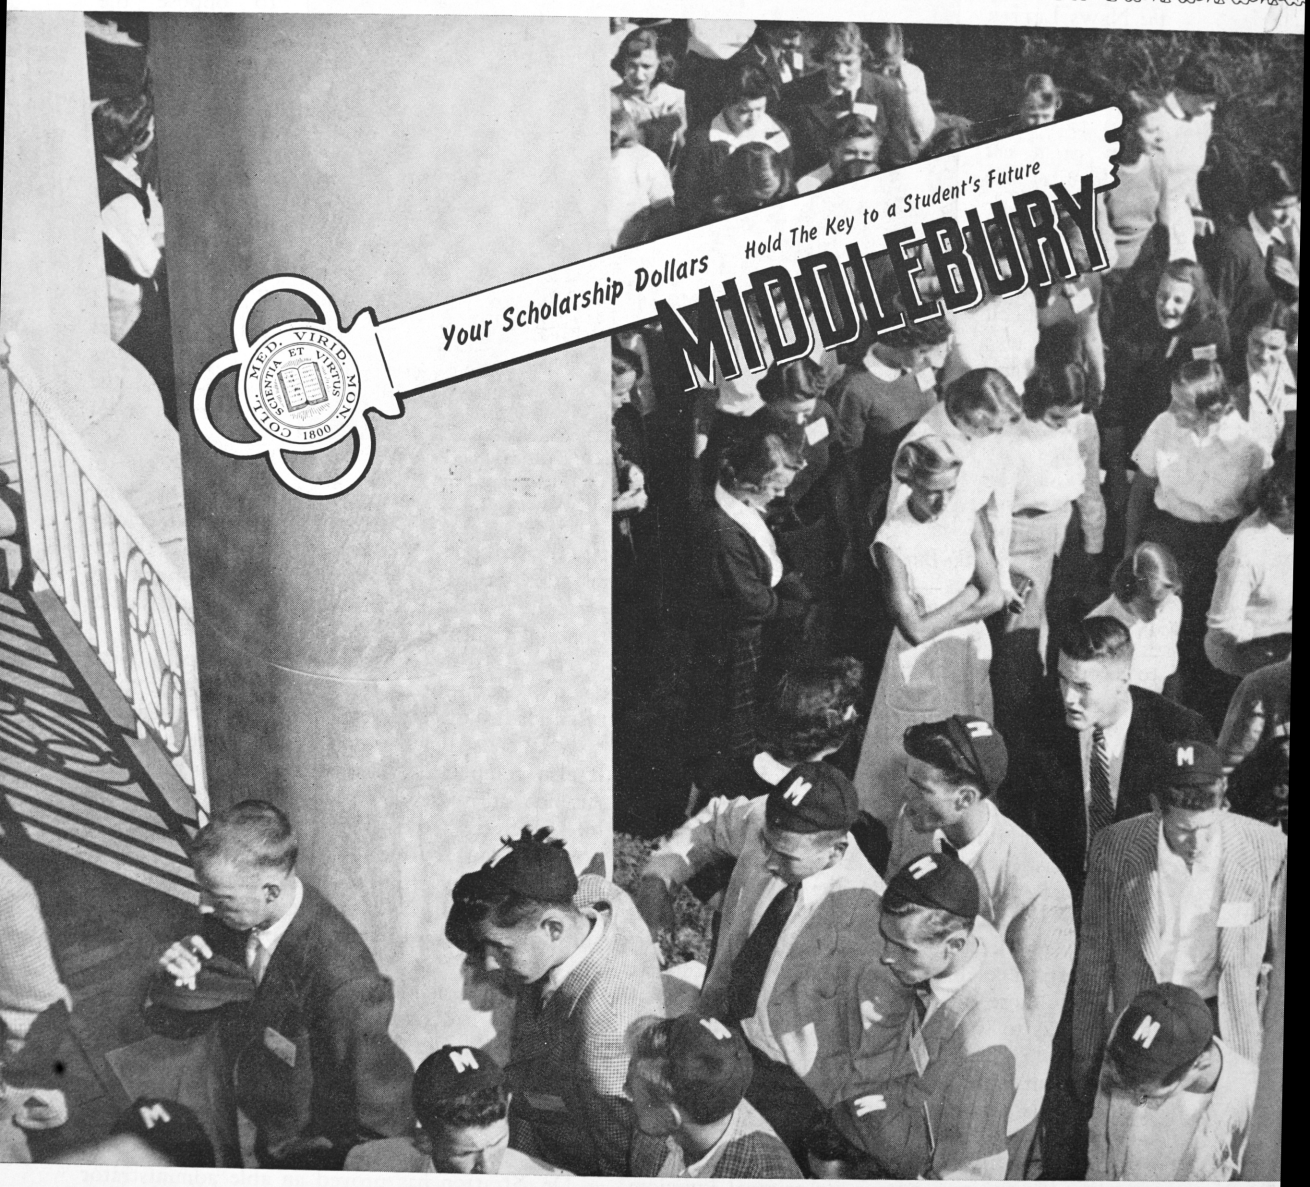
THE MIDDLEBURY COLLEGE

NEWS LETTER

SENT BY THE COLLEGE TO ALL MIDDLEBURY MEN AND WOMEN



VOLUME XXVI APRIL, 1952 No. 3

Editor's Note: As the April issue of the NEWS LETTER is going to press President Stratton is on his way by plane to Saudi Arabia on a one year leave of absence from his College duties to serve as Director of Technical Co-operation in this Middle East country. Due to a very busy schedule President Stratton was unable to write a President's Page for this issue. Instead, we are reprinting an appropriate editorial from the Burlington (Vt.) Free Press.

President Stratton is shown above being sworn in as Director of the Point Four Program in Saudi Arabia. Officiating is Marvin Will, State Department Official, during ceremonies in the New State Department Building, Washington, D.C.

MIDDLEBURY COLLEGE has granted President Samuel S. Stratton a year's leave of absence to accept the appointment as Director of Technical Co-operation in Saudi Arabia, under the State Department's Point 4 plan.

While it is assumed that Dr. Stratton will return to Middlebury at the end of a year the importance of the assignment he has been given, and the uncertainties connected with events in the Middle East just now, may change those plans.

As most Americans know, the United States is intensely interested in Saudi Arabia because of the huge oil resources of that area. King Ibn-Saud, who in 1950 celebrated the jubilee of his rule, is one of the more stable leaders in the Middle East and, thanks to wise treatment of him in the past, he has been friendly to the United States. Undoubtedly it is in the hope of keeping him friendly that the mission to be headed by Dr. Stratton is going to Saudi Arabia.

King Ibn-Saud has been very successful in expanding his territories from his original kingdom of Nejd so that his government now extends over nine-tenths of the Arabian peninsula.

In the Arab League, Saudi Arabia has worked with Egypt, Syria and Lebanon to oppose the expansionist policy of King Abdullah of Jordan.

Late in 1950, Saudi Arabia contracted a $15,000,000 loan from the Export-Import Bank of Washington. The original payment of $4,000,000 was devoted to the construction of airports, roads and seaports to improve the transportation facilities of the country. It was announced that the remainder would be used for the development of agriculture and the improvement of health, sanitation and transport.

The Arabian American Oil Company (Aramco), operating in the Saudi Arabian province of El Hasa on the Persian Gulf, opened last year a railway constructed westward from the oil fields. It also completed a desert pipeline to pump the Aramco oil westward across the desert through Jordan, Syria and Lebanon to the Mediterranean port of Sidon, south of Beirut.

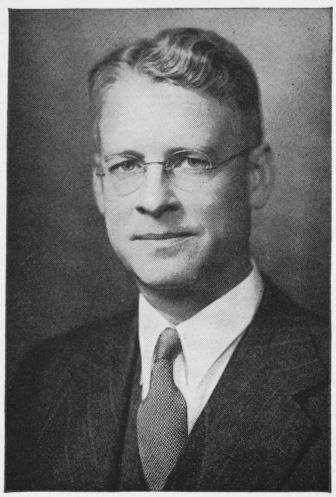
Undoubtedly there are fears in both Washington and London that the Islamic revolt manifest in Iran and Egypt may spread to other parts of the Middle East, including Saudi Arabia.

Whatever friends we still have in the Islamic world, we had better try to keep, unless we are willing to have them turn their eyes toward Moscow for leadership. It would be very embarrassing to have the oil which is now controlled by Saudi Arabia flowing into Soviet-controlled tanks.

Dr. Stratton has proved an able administrator as head of Middlebury College. All Vermonters will wish him success in his new undertaking, and hope for his early return to Vermont.

Middlebury In The News

Dr. Freeman Assumes Presidential Duties; Dr. Stratton on Leave



Dr. Stephen A. Freeman, a member of the faculty for the past 27 years and Vice President of Middlebury is in charge of the College during the absence of President Samuel S. Stratton.

Egbert C. Hadley, '10, chairman of the Middlebury Board of Trustees issued the following statement on Saturday, February 9, after a meeting of the Board: "In the absence of President Stratton, Vice President Stephen A. Freeman will take over the direction of the academic affairs of Middlebury College."

President Stratton has been given a one-year leave of absence from presidential duties by the Board of Trustees to accept a Point 4 Program appointment as Director of Technical Cooperation in Saudi-Arabia. He left the United States by plane on Feb. 25 for the Middle East and assumed his position on March 1. Acceptance of the Point 4 post by Dr. Stratton marks a return to government service for Middlebury's President who served on the War Production Board in Washington and on the War Labor Board in Vermont during World War II.

Dr. Freeman returned from Paris in early February where he personally directed the first term of the Middlebury Graduate School of French in France. While in Europe he also coordinated the activities of the Middlebury Graduate School of Spanish in Spain.

In addition to being Vice President of the College, Dr. Freeman is director of the Middlebury Summer Language Schools. Dr. Freeman holds three degrees from Harvard, the honorary degree of L.H.D. from the University of Vermont, and has been on the Middlebury faculty since 1925. He is a reserve colonel in the U. S. Army and commands Middlebury's Strategic Intelligence Unit.

1952 Football Schedule

Middlebury will play a seven-game football schedule next fall. The Panthers will meet Williams for the first time since 1947. Union and Hamilton, fixtures on postwar Panther schedules, will not play Middlebury next fall. The schedule: Sept. 27, Wesleyan at Middlebury; Oct. 4, Bates at Lewiston, Me.; Oct. 11, Williams at Williamstown, Mass.; Oct. 18, Tufts at Middlebury; Oct. 25, Trinity at Middlebury; Nov. 1, Norwich at Middlebury; Nov. 8, Vermont at Burlington.

Dr. Neuse Authors Book

A fourth textbook by Dr. Werner Neuse, chairman of the Middlebury German Department has recently been published by the American Book Co. Dr. Neuse is also Director of the College's German Summer School. He has been a member of the Middlebury faculty for 20 years.

The name of Dr. Neuse's new textbook is Deutscher Sprachgebrauch. It is a composition book for third year German. This book is the fourth textbook written by Dr. Neuse. He has also contributed three articles for a new edition of Britannica Junior, published by the Encyclopaedia Britannica on "Berlin," "Germany," and "The Danube."

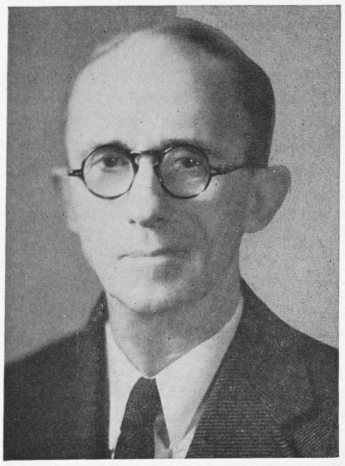
Professors Cady, Cline, Howard, Swett, to Retire in June



PROFESSOR HOWARD (Psychology)
37 Years

PROFESSOR SWETT (Geography, Drafting)
43 Years

PROFESSOR CADY (English)
43 Years

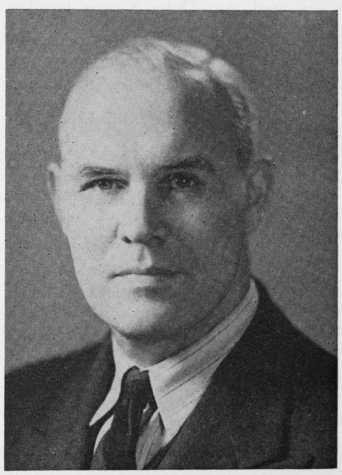
Four professors whose service to the College totals 155 years will retire at the close of the current academic year. Ending their long and distinguished teaching careers at Middlebury in June will be Professors Frank W. Cady, '99, Frank E. Howard, Phelps N. Swett, and Allen M. Cline.

In personal messages to each of the four retiring professors, President Stratton, before his departure for the Middle East, said:

"The realization that at the end of this year you become emeritus brings to me a sense of very real personal loss. In the nine years since I became president of Middlebury I have always been conscious that the wisdom and tolerance and loyalty of our senior professors have been important factors in giving stability and dignity to our college."



PROFESSOR CLINE (History)
32 Years

Faculty Members Honored

Five faculty members have been honored with appointments to fill long-existing professorial chairs which have been vacant in recent years. The Board of Trustees approved this action on the recommendation of President Stratton. All appointments are effective July 1, 1952.

Named to occupy the vacant academic chairs are Professors P. Conant Voter, Walter T. Bogart, J. Stuart Prentice, Douglas S. Beers, and John G. Bowker. All now head major college departments.

Appointed Burr Professor of Chemistry and Natural History is Professor Voter, a member of the faculty since 1912. He heads the Division of Natural Sciences. This professorship was provided for in the will of Joseph Burr of Manchester in 1829.

Appointed Jermain Professor of Political Economy is Dr. Walter T. Bogart who now heads the Political Science Department. He joined the Middlebury faculty in 1937. This chair was established in 1873 in the will of James B. Jermain of Watervliet, N. Y.

Professor J. Stuart Prentice will assume the vacant Hepburn Professorship of Economics. He has been a Middlebury faculty member since 1931 and has headed the economics department since 1950. Funds for this professorship came in 1908 from A. Barton Hepburn, donor of Hepburn Hall and many other special funds to aid the College.

Dr. Douglas S. Beers, chairman of the Humanities Division and now on a sabbatical leave, has been appointed Hudson Professor of English. Prof. Beers joined the Middlebury faculty in 1925 and also heads the English Department. Funds to establish this chair were raised by subscription in 1920 by friends and alumni of the College to honor Hudson, an 1846 graduate of Middlebury, and in recognition of the completion of thirty years of service by Prof. Charles Baker Wright.

Professor John G. Bowker has been named Baldwin Professor of Mathematics and Natural Philosophy. Funds to endow this professorship [Continued on page 19]

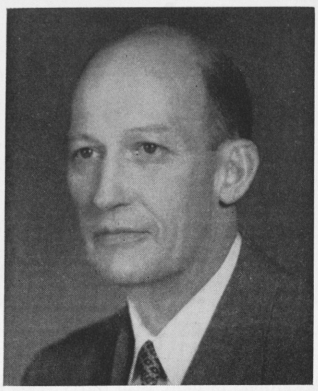
Alumni in the Headlines*



WILLIAM BREWSTER, '18

William R. Brewster, '18, for the past sixteen years Headmaster of Kimball Union Academy, Meriden, N. H., has resigned for reasons of health.

Mr. Brewster has been named Director of Public Relations and he will devote such time as his health will permit to organizations of the Alumni of Kimball Union Academy and also to the Councils of parents of Academy students which he has actively fostered while serving as headmaster.

The Hanover (N. H.) Gazette commenting editorially on Mr. Brewster's resignation stated, ... "William R. Brewster, headmaster of Kimball Union Academy, affectionately known as 'Chief,' has resigned. . . . Every boy and parent of a boy is swallowing hard to keep the emotions down over the report of such news. . . . Conscience, however, and loving regard for William and Leona Brewster makes it difficult to ask for further sacrifice of vital energies in constant and continued service to the daily life of the Academy. It has been a long day for this devoted man and wife for a long, long time. Being a father and mother to innumerable boys, during many years is a rich and rewarding experience. We do not know a man and woman who can bear such eloquent testimony to this fundamental truth. The fact that they can is the measure of what their lives mean to many people. We think they know this is true and we are glad they can treasure their memories for many years to come in related experience which will be impossible for them to escape, dedicated as they are."

Miss Faye George '50, is shown here speaking into the mouthpiece of her dictavox with which she takes dictation word for word.

Faye George, '50, Blind 15 Years Earns Living as Court Reporter

Life is not without its purpose for Faye George, '50, a resident of South Barre, Vt.

Although blind since the age of 10, this cheerful 25-year-old Middlebury graduate now takes verbatim transcriptions of jury trials, hearings and conferences. As a stenographer she is self-supporting.

This in itself is a tribute to the will of this young woman. However, there is much more to her story than merely that of a blind girl who makes good as a stenographer.

Stricken suddenly with the loss of sight 15 years ago, Faye, one of nine children has never allowed self-pity or depression enter her life.

Always a brilliant student, Faye let little time elapse after becoming sightless before she entered the Perkins Institution at Watertown, Mass. She studied there for nine years, learning braille along with the regular courses of study.

Faye then took a major jump and overcame one of the biggest obstacles in the life of a sightless person. Not content with her secondary education at Perkins Institution, she enrolled at Middlebury to major in Sociology.

Four years later she received one of the biggest thrills of her life when she received her bachelor of arts degree with Cum Laude honors.

Since graduating from Middlebury in June 1950, Faye has been busy earning a living with the aid of a modern machine, the dictavox.

With this machine Faye is able to take court proceedings, dictations and conferences word for word.

She has acted as court reporter both in the St. Johnsbury and Montpelier Municipal Courts. Included among the trials she has covered was a three-day trial in St. Johnsbury Municipal Court.

One of her most difficult jobs, she states, was the verbatim coverage of the recent fact-finding conference of the Vermont Personnel Board at Montpelier. At this conference there were ten different men talking back and forth and Faye was able to take the proceedings completely.

However, she admits that she had some difficulty at first in connecting voices with the names.

Although she said she has never actually timed herself as to how many words she can take a minute, she revealed that during the Personnel Board conference she averaged 100 words a minute of transcription. This included all the pauses between speakers.

MARY O. POLLARD, '96

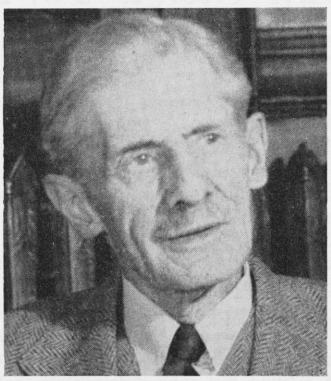
Mary Orenda Pollard, of Middlebury, Vermont, was a schoolteacher for over 40 years. Today, at seventy-eight, she is as perky as a kitten, has more energy than two buckets of sunshine and is among the most active newspaper correspondents in the state of Vermont. As Middlebury's sole reporter for the Burlington Free Press, Miss Pollard turns in nothing but scoops. "Nobody beats Pollard," is the way the townsfolks put it. "Scoop" Pollard covers her home town from stork to cemetery, from assault and battery to sorority teas, from fire truck to courthouse.

Miss Pollard went to work for the Free Press some nine years ago. She had just come out of four years of retirement, after more than four decades of teaching: first in Middlebury, then in Minnesota, two Illinois towns, Nebraska, a settlement school in Tennessee and (for 20 years) at Frances Shimer Junior College at Mount Carroll, Illinois. Though she describes herself now as "primarily a housekeeper in a seven-room house," she devotes eight to 12 hours a day to gathering news. Her hurly-burly day starts with a six-o'clock breakfast. By eight o'clock her house is tidied up, the dishes done and she's on the phone taking reports about the previous evening's events from local churches, Middlebury College and social groups. By ten o'clock she's out doing the town, hitting all the high spots—court, jail, college and hospital—with notebook in hand, keeping her ears open for gossip and eyes peeled for accidents. All doors are open to her. "You have to come clean with Miss Pollard," one lawyer said. "She taught most of us in school before we were dry behind the ears."

To get her copy to Burlington on time, Miss Pollard leaves an envelope at the bus depot every afternoon to be picked up by the bus driver and delivered to a copy boy at the Free Press, 36 miles away.

Despite her sunup start, Miss Pollard's evenings are full. She visits, attends club meetings, helps school children with their problems, and writes a column—"Looking Backward"—for Middlebury's weekly Addison Independent. She's a good cook, an active gardener, a Chicago White Sox rooter since 1903, and is presently weaving cloth for a winter dress.

"I'm having a wonderful time." she says, "always have and always will. Tell that to the boys on the city desk."



ALBERT SARGENT, '94

Albert S. Sargent, '94, is the oldest practicing attorney in Barre, Vt. A Testimonial reception was held in his honor recently in Barre.

RALPH DUMAS, '34

Lt. Col. Ralph H. Dumas, '34, was one of the eighteen United States Air Force men who parachuted safely from a twin engined C-47 transport plane when the aircraft "iced up" in a blizzard after its fuel gave out over Sidney, Nova Scotia on Feb. 28. The plane which was enroute from Westover, Mass., to its base at Torbay, Newfoundland, crashed on the outskirts of Sydney, a city of 30,000 inhabitants. Colonel Dumas resides at 12 Linden St., Garden City, N. Y.

CHARLES HAUGH, '21

Charles J. Haugh, '21, has a rich background of more than thirty years in the insurance business during the period of its greatest development.

Before joining the Travelers Insurance Company of Hartford, Conn., in 1944 Mr. Haugh was actuary of the National Bureau of Casualty Underwriters for many years, and today he represents his company on important committees both of the bureau and the Association of Casualty & Surety Companies. His insurance career began in 1921 following graduation from Middlebury. After actuarial assignments in New York and North Dakota State Funds he joined the National Bureau in 1925 as assistant actuary.

Mr. Haugh is a fellow and past president of the Casualty Actuarial Society.

Mrs. E. S. Chase, '25

Mrs. E. Sheridan Chase, '25, is one of six New England men and women to receive the French Government's Palmes Academiques medal this year.

Mrs. Chase was honored at a special ceremony and reception at the French Consulate New Year's Day in Boston. Andre Chambon, French consul-general for New England, made the presentation.

She received the award with a citation for her encouragement and interest in French language and culture for many years at Ecole Champlain, French summer camp for girls.

The medal is given by the French government to members of other nations who qualify. It can be received only once in a lifetime.

Mrs. Chase makes her home at 50 South Willard St., Burlington, Vermont.

"We Start Anew at 62!"

By Edgar J. ("Cap") Wiley, '13

Whether we like it or not, we are what the doctors call "Climate Bound" in Arizona because of bronchial difficulties in Vermont's colder climate. Thus we have chosen the foregoing new motto and have decided that we might as well rejoice over such things as exchanging our snow shovel for a winter lawnmower. Living in the "Valley of the Sun" fortunately has some advantages to offset the disappointments of a premature exit from the Middlebury scene with its many friends and cherished associations.

We probably are now regarded like the people in Mandalay in "Bill" Upson's sesquicentennial musical comedy "Middlebury Parade." The lines I believe, go something like this: "We feel so very sorry for the folks in Mandalay—It's a very nice country but it's too far away!" It's amazing what kindly things people can find to say in obituaries or about folks who go 3000 miles away with the prospect of staying there. We have already had the pleasing experience of reading such comments and messages and though we know, better than anyone else, how unmerited many of these golden-haze statements have been we do appreciate the friendly spirit that has inspired them.

"Cap" Wiley is well known by most Middlebury Alumni. He is shown above with Barbara A. Wells, Alumnae Secretary and President Samuel S. Stratton, checking a College film and other details prior to departure on one of the many Alumni dinner tours he has made for numerous years.

Editor Huban very generously offered me a spot of 1700 words in the April News Letter for: "a farewell message to your nearly 7000 alumni friends" and suggested: "mention of as many as possible interesting developments" during the nearly 44 years (including student days) that I have had the privilege of occupying a ring-side seat at Middlebury. The catalogue list of historical events during that period numbers about 100. As each could easily rate a story by itself it's obvious that I must select just a few and draw those mostly from the earlier years as most readers are familiar with recent developments.

When I entered in 1909, President John M. Thomas, '90, had just begun his administration. Aside from his promising me a $60 scholarship and a waitership I was chiefly influenced in choosing Middlebury over U.V.M. by Dr. Thomas' great faith in Middlebury's future and I was eager to be a part of the new era. It seemed to be a rare opportunity to grow up with such an institution. This same faith and enthusiasm doubtless influenced men like A. Barton Hepburn, '71 to plant their fortunes on Middlebury hilltops.

"Cap" Wiley Retires

"A scholar of integrity and a man of many friends and durable devotions is Edgar J. Wiley, '13," President Stratton said in announcing the retirement of Mr. Wiley as Director of Alumni Relations and Placement after 39 years of serving Middlebury College.

Mr. Wiley has decided to retire from his College duties for reasons of health. During the past year he has been on a leave of absence from Middlebury and is now living in Phoenix, Arizona, where he intends to reside following his official College retirement on Sept. 15.

In accepting Mr. Wiley's resignation, President Stratton sent him the following message: "We want you to know that in accepting your resignation from Middlebury College we do so with the sincere personal regrets of the entire college family. In the years which we have been associated I have always appreciated your complete integrity and your undeviating loyalty. My knowledge of your competency, tact, and good judgment in your important post has always been a source of [Continued on page 17]

This period was a turning point in Middlebury history. The little college had recently completed its first hundred years with a record of sound scholarship and a list of distinguished graduates, several of whom became the donors of the finest buildings on the campus of today or gave outstanding service on the Middlebury faculty or Board of Trustees. Under the scholarly leadership of President Ezra Brainerd, who had just retired, a small faculty of nine or ten brilliant professors had set a high standard of teaching and personal integrity. There were only five buildings and the annual budget ran little over $25,000 a year. They had somehow literally "made bricks without straw." Faculty members did the clerical and administrative work in their "spare time"—with no secretaries to help. Middlebury's beloved first Dean, Walter E. Howard, '71, famous for his Law courses, had pecked out on his old Hammond typewriter, an unbelievable number of letters to prospective students and traveled around interviewing them.

"Cap" has held many important positions at Middlebury and in all assignments has done excellent work for his Alma Mater. He has served as Dean of Men, Director of Admissions and Personnel, Alumni Secretary, Director of Alumni Relations and Placement, and Director of the 1923 "Million Dollar Drive" for endowment. During 1947 he headed the Fund Drive that raised $400,000 for the erection of the College's World War II Memorial Field House and Gymnasium.

The time had come for expansion, however, if the College were to keep its respected place among the other New England Colleges that were already adjusting to the changing times. There had to be more students, more faculty, more adequate buildings, and more money. It was literally as well as figuratively in the "horse and buggy" era, with three flourishing livery stables in town when I arrived as a Freshman, and only four or five early-vintage automobiles in the community.

Except for a year of graduate study at Harvard and three years in the U.S.O. during World War II, "Cap" has been at Middlebury since 1913. Above, Mr. and Mrs. Wiley (Pruda Harwood, '12) outside the U.S.O. building in Williamsburg, Va.

As one of the few around now who witnessed the transition from the "horse and buggy" period to the relatively "plush" College of today with its plant valued at several million dollars and its scores of automobiles parked about, I venture to say that the really critical years were those between 1910 and 1930. Problems galore since then have required the most skillful handling such as President Samuel S. Stratton's necessary and courageous "egg breaking" to make the "omelettes" required by the Navy V12 but the great progress of the past twenty years was really built on the developments between 1910 and 1930. Had some different decisions been made then Middlebury College would not be recognizable today.

In 1910 Middlebury, was often referred to as a "Poor Man's College" and in the effort to build up enrollment, publicity was aimed chiefly at students "from homes of modest means." The catalogue said: "Middlebury is located in a frugal agricultural region which favors economy" but others who could afford more lavish living were invited to consider the advantages of "the simple life," (a forerunner of today's arguments over catering to high school vs. prep-school students). Tuition was only $80 a year, room rent a little over $1.00 a week and board at Hamlin Commons (called locally, "The Hash House") was $3.00 a week. The catalogue, however, commented encouragingly: "The food is plain but abundant." No doubt this all had an important effect in promoting Middlebury's in-

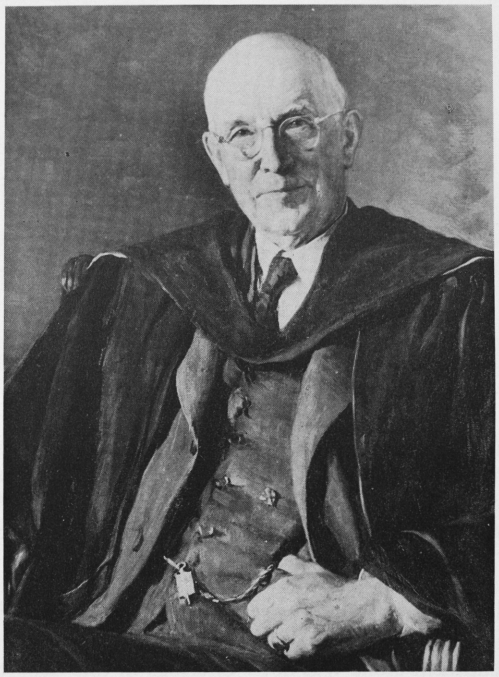
A Great Middlebury Man

JOHN MARTIN THOMAS, '90
1869—1952



DR. JOHN MARTIN THOMAS, '90, retired educator, author, civic leader and President of Middlebury College from 1908 to 1921 died in the Rutland Hospital on February 26th after suffering a relapse following a major operation. In addition to being a former President of Middlebury, Dr. Thomas also served as President of Pennsylvania State College, Rutgers and Norwich University. Since his retirement from the Norwich presidency in 1944 he has been operating an orchard at Mendon, Vt.

When Dr. Thomas replaced Ezra Brainard in 1908 as President of Middlebury College, the student body numbered 203, and the faculty included eleven members. The total endowment of the College was only $415,340, and the campus was confined to 30 acres. During Dr. Thomas' presidency the College expanded rapidly, and by the time he left Middlebury to become President of Pennsylvania State College, the student body numbered 447, the faculty 41, and the campus area had increased to 224 acres. The endowment had been increased to $1,597,329.

Following the announcement of Dr. Thomas' resignation in 1921, the trustees of the College issued a statement commending the work of Dr. Thomas and stating that he was responsible for putting Middlebury on the educational map of New England and gaining a wide and enviable recognition for Middlebury as an institution of "sound learning, clean morals, and worthy ideals."

The following editorial reprinted from the Rutland (Vt.) Daily Herald expresses the feeling of many Alumni-ae and friends of the College:—

Dr. John M. Thomas retired in 1944 as head of Norwich University, his fourth college presidency since assuming the presidency of Middlebury College in 1908, and at 75 might well have been counted out of active life at that time. If not then ready for the armchair by the fire, then certainly later after he was seriously injured in an automobile accident in 1947.

As it turned out, up to the time of his death at the age of 82, yesterday at the Rutland hospital, Dr. Thomas never retired to the fireside either physically or in spirit, despite his age and the effects of his accident injuries. He continued active in mind and body and as a result will be remembered by younger generations as more than a one-time Vermont celebrity.

After his "retirement" in 1944, Dr. Thomas served several terms in the Legislature, participated actively in political campaigns, served as a member of the State Development commission, became one of the founders of Rutland's Junior college, became president of the Rutland Rotary club, studied for and was ordained to the Episcopal ministry. He continued to serve on a variety of boards and to accept speaking engagements up to the last.

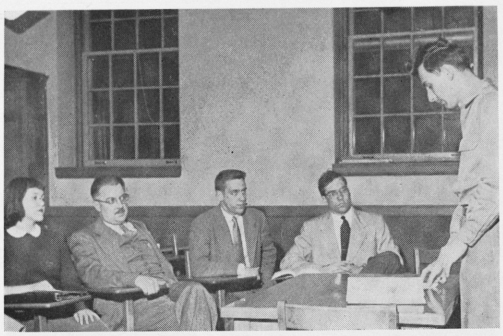
Much younger men might wonder and inquire how a man is able to whip up an aging body and spirit to indulge in such activity in the late years of life. The answer is that Dr. Thomas never had to whip up his spirit. His problem became much more a matter of adjusting a youthful energy and will to failing physical strength. He never accepted the idea that he was "on the shelf." Active as he continued to be, it wasn't the scale of activity to which he was accustomed.

Dr. Thomas' talents were varied. In the college field, he was known as a [Continued on page 19]

Sociology At Middlebury College

By Professor Russell G. Sholes

Sociology is a field of study in the Social Sciences which has developed in the last seventy-five years from the mother field of Philosophy. Just as the older Social Sciences were founded when there was a sufficient accumulation of knowledge about a particular activity, such as trade or politics, and there seemed little possibility of putting that knowledge to use under the current controls, so did Sociology emerge as an accumulation of knowledge about group relationships.



Students participate in a seminar preparing for the comprehensive examinations. There are ten students in this group. William S. Frei, '53, (standing) ponders a point while (left to right) Viola J. Rice, '52, Professor Sholes, Roger R. Gibson, '53 and Instructor Harold P. Parker, '47, listen.

In the process of emerging, the subject attracted a number of persons who had been stimulated by training along religious and humanitarian lines and were satisfied neither with the analysis of current group problems nor with their solution. Professor Bowman suggests, "as their study progressed they realized that humanitarian sentiment alone was not an answer and they turned to the methods of science for a more comprehensive knowledge. As in any scientific research, particularly where there are applied aspects, it is an easy and human step from objective knowledge to interest in improvement. This is especially true in the United States where knowledge for its own sake is an ideal which runs counter to our pragmatic tendencies."

For this reason it is very interesting to trace the history of Sociology at Middlebury. During its first century of existence the College had produced a number of graduates who went successfully into the ministry, the law and teaching. Most of these individuals had followed the Classical Course in College, and Sociology made its first appearance in a Middlebury cataloge of 1894 as an elective in that course. It may however have been a new name for an earlier course called Social Reform. Perhaps the change in name came from the individual who was now to offer this course for a number of years, Professor W. E. Howard. Professor Howard had graduated in the class of 1871, received his LL.D at Ripon and in 1894 at his Alma Mater, he introduced a course in Sociology.

There is no description of courses at that time, but it continued to be offered as a single course for a number of years until Professor Howard became the head of the Department of Political and Social Sciences. During the several years following there were two sections of Sociology and the description seems to indicate that it covered a considerable part of what some years later was offered as four separate courses. In one year Sociology constituted one-fourth of all the offerings in this department.

In the catalog of 1911 among courses offered to the women students the first indication of the modern trend appears. Miss Crawford, the Dean of Women offered a course in the Function of the Family. There is nothing to indicate that the men were allowed to take this course or that they were even interested in the subject.

The catalog of 1922 lists for the first time the name of Professor Julius S. Kingsley. Professor Kingsley was a man of remarkable energy and knowledge who had been attracted to Middlebury by the late President Thomas. He had been persuaded to leave a very successful teaching career in New York to develop at Middlebury a strong department of Pedagogy. The projected plans were not accomplished, so Professor Kingsley was pressed into the organization of a new survey course. While a graduate student he had with characteristic energy and enthusiasm enrolled simultaneously under two variations of his name at Columbia and earned both his M.A. and M.S. He now turned to Columbia again where the pioneer course in Contemporary Civilization was being developed, and was able to use the name, syllabus and reading lists which had been organized there; but even this failed to take up all his energies and in the catalog of 1923 appears for the first sime the new Department of Sociology with Contemporary Civilization as one of four courses offered. During the next eleven years until his death in 1934 he taught large classes in C.C., Sociology and in Education. It was the privilege of this writer in 1928 to become associated with Professor Kingsley in the Sociology Department and upon his death in 1934 to undertake its direction.

Professor Sholes graduated from Washington University (St. Louis) in 1922 and was awarded his A.M. in 1923 in the field of Juvenile Delinquency. He was employed for two years as Psychologist of the St. Louis Child Guidance Clinic, taught three years in the Philippines and came to Middlebury in 1927. He has done further graduate work at the Universities of Minnesota, Illinois and Chicago. He is the father of three children; George, Middlebury '49; Nancy, Allegheny '50 and Susan, Denison '54.

In 1935 Contemporary Civilization was separated, and Sociology became a Department in its own right 41 years after the first appearance of a Sociology course in the college catalog.

Early in the 30's, at a meeting at Brown University, representatives from Sociology Departments of colleges and universities of New England, New York and Eastern Pennsylvania met and established greater uniformity in their course offerings and content, through a changed point of view, that of group relationships. The Lynds had just published MIDDLETOWN, the first of a whole new series of community studies which were to alter the entire structure of the subject and make necessary a complete revision of our textbooks. The accumulation of a number of these observational studies established this new point of view. As a result, a new emphasis, stressing the objective analytical observation of social processes as they actually exist, rather than the former approach of social reform, developed within the field. This new objective approach, it soon became apparent, had particularly fortunate timing, in view of the many group problems that arose during the depression and following years.

Courses in Sociology at Middlebury, accordingly, now presented information and procedures from this new point of reference. It is now commonly agreed, as expressed by Cuber, that modern sociology is a field of knowledge, not a reform movement and that its subject matter should consist only of the knowledges which are based on careful and repeated observations. Further, that sociology should be concerned primarily but not exclusively with the study of what 'is', not with speculation about what 'ought to be,'

Professor Sholes is shown conducting one of five seminars on marriage held each week. Recently he was named Lieut. Governor for the Vermont Province of the Society of Pi Gamma Mu, high honorary Social Science Society.

REPORTING THE STUDENT SIDE OF MIDDLEBURY NEWS

J. F. Smith

Jack Steele, '36, Assistant Chief of the New York Herald Tribune Washington Bureau and speaker at the Tenth Annual Middlebury College Conference Speaker, talks informally with a group of students between sessions of the Conference. Mr. Steele is the winner of the 1951 Heywood Broun Award. His stories on the Reconstruction Finance Corporation scandal and other accounts of corruption in Washington were chosen by the American Newspaper Guild as the best newspaper work of the year "in the spirit of Heywood Broun," New York newspaper man, who help found the Guild.

Middlebury College Conference 1952

The Tenth Annual Middlebury College Conference, analyzing national morality, ended Sunday afternoon, March 23rd with the conclusion that the right of self-expression, rather than what is said, is man's most cherished right.

Speakers at the first session of the Conference on Saturday enlarged upon a call for faith and morality in American action which was sounded by the keynote speaker, Governor John Davis Lodge of Connecticut.

All Speakers at Saturday's session were in accord that America's armed might alone will not win peace for the world, but that spiritual might must be added to the battle.

Political immorality in Washington was attacked by Jack Steele, '36, Assistant Chief of the New York Herald Tribune's Washington Bureau. Mr. Steele is a former editor of the Middlebury Campus.

"The Harding Administration scandals could not hold a candle to those breaking almost daily in the Truman Administration," said Mr. Steele who has won awards [Continued on page 17]

There was no "Hell Week" on the College campus this spring, instead a "Help Week" took place. For five days men from all nine of Middlebury's fraternities worked in the service of the community. Stephen Pilcher, '54, in a CAMPUS feature article wrote:

"Due to the efforts of one group of fraternity men, St. Stephen's Episcopal Church parishioners have gained three or four months toward completion of their basement community room. In fact, now they expect to begin extensive use of the room this summer. In three days, twenty men a day removed seventeen truckloads of dirt from the church's 'cellar,' and have completed as much digging as can be done at the present time.

"Another group of men paid a visit to Porter Hospital to freshen up its always gay interior. In two afternoons, the operating room and the men's ward had their walls and floors scrubbed clean. The paint job which had been planned, had to be called off as those areas which were to be painted were filled with patients.

"A third group became steeple-jacks as they insulated the dome and curved roof of the Congregational Church. This was a job that sorely needed doing, since the church was losing a great deal of heat through the bare dome.

"The other six groups were dispatched to the Sheldon Museum, where they were engaged as painters and floor scrapers. The Sheldon Museum is probably the focal point of local pride, and really needed a paint job, but the museum was unable to pay painters' wages.

"The idea was first publicly expressed in a Campus editorial of three weeks ago. It was inspired by the similar programs of community service already existing in the ATO and TC houses. Ten days later the scheme had been unanimously approved in the I.F.C., and the next day Help Week was in full swing.

At the request of the Trustees of the College and President Stratton, Dr. and Mrs. Stephen A. Freeman are occupying the President's House on South Street during the absence of Dr. Stratton. . . . Professor John G. Bowker, chairman of the Mathematics Dept., has been appointed chairman of the Faculty Education Policy Committee. . . . Dr. Mischa H. Fayer, head of the Russian Dept. has returned from a leave of sabbatical absence and Dr. Douglas S. Beers, head of the English Dept. is on a leave of sabbatical absence this semester.

Nate Whitside, '51, and Alice Hildreth, '51, were the King and Queen of the 1952 Middlebury College Winter Carnival. . . . Dartmouth won the Carnival skiing competition with a total of 584.03 points. . . . Middlebury was second with a total of 563.95 points. . . . The Panthers, however, handed the Dartmouth Indians a 4 to 2 defeat in hockey.

and attention for his work in exposing five-percenters in government contracting and corruption in the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

"True, no single scandal has matched Teapot Dome in catching the public's imagination," said Mr. Steele. "This is because corruption is so wholesale today. The enormous number of favors our Government has to bestow upon its citizens are put on the auction block."

President Truman, according to Steele, is a personally incorruptible man but he allows these scandals to continue by refusing to houseclean the men of small caliber whom he has placed around him.

"In the end it is the fault of the top government officials because they have allowed human frailty which begins with the parking ticket-fixer to reach the highest levels of our Government," said Steele.

The Conclusion that the right of self-expression, rather than what is said, is man's most cherished right was expressed by Professor Robert S. Babcock of the University of Vermont, moderator of the Conference, as he searched for a "thread of coherence" running through the Conference. In his summary address Professor Babcock sharply evaluated the remarks of keynoter Governor Lodge, as well as the other ten speakers. Professor Babcock termed the right of self-expression the best reason for man's wanting to be alive in 1952.

"But the right of self-expression bears with it a responsibility to one's fellow man," he added. "No man can be an island unto himself. Morality arises only out of the jungle and into society, and capitalism is a justified means of bringing about this transition."

Settlement of the recent steel strike threat was used as an exhibit of political immorality by Jack Turcott, Labor Editor of the New York Daily News at the Sunday morning session.

"A proposed eight-cent hourly increase for steel workers was termed dangerously inflationary last November by the government," said Mr. Turcott. "Now an aggregate 22½ cent increase is called not inflationary. This is a double-dealing election year overture to the steel workers' votes by the administration through the ridiculously constructed Wage Stabilization Board."

Capitalism and the profit system were stoutly defended by Herluf Olsen, Professor of Economics at Dartmouth. Each economic group in America wants a reasonably regular rate of profit with a maximum of self expression to attain each person's desired 'economic package,' according to Professor Olsen.

"That package can be attained best when each group within the economy pulls together with the others. Instead, for the past twenty years, whenever our economy was suffering from indigestion, we have run to the government for medicine."

Only in man can moral evil be found, according to Carlos Baker, Princeton professor of English. "Man is the sole author of evil," he said, "Man has the copyright on that commodity. Although we can never attain absolute right, we must know what it is in order to approximate it."

Other speakers at the Tenth Annual Middlebury Conference were: Michael Harrington, Associate Editor of the Catholic Worker; Reverend John Fletcher, Episcopal clergyman from the Episcopal Theological School, Cambridge, Mass.; Ira Marion, script writer for the American Broadcasting Company and author of "Crime Does Not Pay;" Professor George de Santillana, professor of history of philosophy and science at M.I.T.; John Nuveen, Chicago banker and former E.C.A. director in Belgium and Greece; and John Atherton, artist from Arlington, Vt.

deep satisfaction to me. Of course, more personally, I shall miss your friendly counsel and support in my task of administering the affairs of the college."

It was also announced by President Stratton that Stanley V. Wright, '18, will fill the vacancy created by the retirement of Mr. Wiley. In addition to his new assignment as Director of Alumni Relations he will continue as Director of Admissions. Gordon C. Perine, '49, assistant director of Admissions, has been named Director of Placement. Mr. Wright has been Acting Director of Alumni Relations and Placement this year.

formal, democratic atmosphere and the premium on working one's way.

Other decisions and developments of those years affected the whole course of events for better or worse. Some of these were: changing admission and graduation requirements to attract students by abandoning the Latin-for-all policy and stressing science and mathematics—establishing a department of Pedagogy, for better training of high school teachers, to justify a generous annual appropriation from the State of Vermont—also a course in Pomology, supposedly useful to the State (but didn't take and was soon dropped)—a play to the Vermont legislature to make Middlebury practically a state college (had this been successful as with William and Mary in Virginia, or the Arizona State Colleges, the character of the College would be very different now)—securing Pearsons and Hepburn Halls that introduced new living standards—raising $25,000 to meet Gov. McCullough's conditional $25,000 for a new gym, making possible a new era in sports and physical education—giving Mead Chapel and religion the central place on the campus with the inspiring inscription: "The Strength of the Hills is His Also" and furnishing a setting for the Vesper Services that, through the years, have added beauty and inspiration to Middlebury life, whatever modern critics of required chapel services may think—expanding the curriculum (in some cases over strenuous protests of faculty stalwarts of the "old school" who then objected to so-called "enrichment" of a liberal arts course by giving academic credit for "sewing, listening to music, playing games and dancing" (I fear that were they here now they might consider the recent auspicious opening of beautiful Carr Hall with its art courses the ultimate in the "gilding of the lily."—Premature announcing of a "Department of Engineering" in a perhaps too-imposing special bulletin, to appeal to male students, before adequate equipment was available, met with sharp criticism from the Carnegie Foundation then making its famous "Study of Education in Vermont." If more fortunately timed and better developed, engineering might possibly now be a very important department, obviating the necessity of sending our engineering-minded students to finish at M.I.T. and R.P.I. after their Junior year—Campaigns for endowment for increasing faculty salaries, netting $438,000 in 1916–17 and $1,000,000 in 1923–28, improving the quality of teaching in the growing faculty—(Maximum salaries increased from $1900 to $3000 after these funds were raised)— Founding of the "Mountain Club," leading to the present emphasis on Winter Sports and the "Snow Bowl," utilizing the bequest of the Battell Forest—graduate grade of study through development of the Summer Language Schools—When rumored that failure to segregate men and women in the Thomas regime lost a bequest of several million dollars, the new president in (1921) Paul D. Moody, a Yale man opposed to coeducation, was told to do two things (he said), raise a million dollars and accomplish segregation. Moving men or women to another location or liquidating one college or the other was seriously considered but a crisis was averted by adoption of technical changes adjusting some inequities of the coeducational system. Even President Moody, who did his best to carry out his mandate, eventually felt that Middlebury's social advantages were superior to those in the segregated colleges.

I, personally, feel that the outcome of this serious problem was a fortunate one as I can testify that the mutual friends and experiences of college days in a "coed" college have provided a very happy foundation for a married life of some 37 years.

Not long ago there appeared in Collier's Magazine an article on college discipline. The writer said that the modern college dean worked with a "light touch." This pricked my conscience a bit for the Administration Committee, when I was its secretary charged with defending and executing its edicts and penalties, worked on the "Spare the rod and spoil the Child" school of thought. Though delightful, kindly gentlemen as individuals, they presented a stern-faced front to the lone miscreant brought "on the carpet." And I fear too, that as Assistant Dean under the beloved "Charlie Baker" Wright and Dean after his retirement, I may have been pretty "hard boiled" and heavy handed. But let me say to any alumnus who may still be smarting from an overdose of my discipline that probably—"it hurt me more than it did you."

Recently I read Lloyd Douglas Time to Remember. His account of his days at Wittenberg gives an excellent picture of that time at Middlebury if a few different fraternity names are substituted and one remembers that the fellow who met him at Leicester Junction or some such place down the line, represented the catch-as-catch-can rushing system that was then in vogue everywhere. Already Sliver Arnold, '13 and Elbert Cole, '15 of those "good old days" at Middlebury have managed to visit us in Phoenix and helped us to keep alive "The Old Midd Spirit" out here.

Now, Middlebury friends, do look in on Mrs. Wiley and me at our new home at 21 West Windsor Avenue in Phoenix, Arizona when you get out into this land of Indians, big hats, cowboy boots and sunshine.

builder rather than as a great educator, yet he possessed more of the earmarks of the scholar than is common among college presidents today. He would never have been satisfied with a reputation as just an administrator or just an educator. He was most proud of his innovations in education, although he wasn't ashamed of his reputation as a money-raiser which went along with his record of building up colleges and universities.

He was a gifted public speaker and blessed with an unusual memory for facts and anecdotes. Once, at 80, he lamented that he had forgotten all the orations of Cicero, but added that he intended to refresh his memory the next day. Men with good memories suffer most from the loss of the gift in their later years, although Dr. Thomas had a mind that continued to retain an amazing fund of knowledge.

He started life as a clergyman and held his first college presidency when college heads were noted as austere and stern, but he did not belong to that school. He had a sense of humor and more than a little charm. His friend, the late Earle Kinsley, said that Dr. Thomas had the faculty of making people enjoy giving him money for various causes. Given the time and favorable opportunity, he could induce the giving mood among the most unlikely prospects.

Like others of his generation of Vermonters, he was a firm believer in the aristocracy of brains. He respected accomplishment in business and professional fields, but at the same time admired a man perhaps more for what he knew, regardless of accomplishment. In the same spirit, he was never satisfied to be the man who had been president of four colleges. He did not reach the point of resting on his laurels but continued to contribute to his community and his state as long as he was able, retaining always a healthy, tolerant outlook on life.

and that it is only one of a group of social sciences which study human behavior, each of which has its own subject matter, point of view, and personnel, none having a corner on the whole truth. Lastly that sociology like all other fields of knowledge, contains differences in professional viewpoint and out of these differences usually comes growth in human knowledge.

The war made its impact particularly upon one course, The Family. Before 1939 there were very few married students in college, but during the war years their numbers increased appreciably. First, there were the G. I. brides who stayed to graduate while their husbands were in service. Later, there were the returning G.I. themselves, many of whom were married. More recently, while the number of married students has decreased, more students plan for marriage soon after their graduation. Consequently the emphasis of the course has changed from The Family to Marriage and its Problems. Because of the large number who elected the course, a group of "brides-to-be" in 1946 proposed that they meet for the course as a small seminar group in which discussion could replace the more formal lecture method of presentation. Two small seminar type sections were started, one for the "brides" and the other for the "grooms" who requested equal consideration. Since that time there have been many more applications each semester for enrollment in these groups than it has been possible to accommodate. Those who are 'pinned' or engaged are given first consideration and the groups are kept small and segregated. Experience has shown this organization encourages freer participation among the members. Currently, groups are tentatively registered for the spring semester of 1954.

Two of the problems which now appear regularly in these groups are concerned with "Mixed marriage" and "Working Wives." The first is a problem with a greater number of students than the graduates of even ten years ago may realize. The second concerns the young people not because the women want primarily a working career but rather because they are realists, and know that in many cases only by the wife's earning can marriage be a more immediate possibility. They recognize also the uncertainties of establishing a home, which the military demands upon the men may soon disrupt and the necessity for being equipped to undertake the economic support of themselves and possibly that of a family. These seminars have contributed to a continual revision of material in the regular lecture course and a growth in appreciation of the problems facing students today.

For those students who wish to make a career in the field of applied sociology we offer a course, Theory and Methods of Social Work. While this is not a training course, a number of students each year go from it into Graduate Schools of Social Work, Departments of Welfare, the "Y", Girl and Boy Scout organizations and other allied service groups.

Since 1941 the department has had two teaching members. In 1949 Mr. Harold P. Parker '47 returned to teach after two years graduate study at Columbia University. In addition to the courses already mentioned our current offerings include: an introductory course in Social Problems; two semesters of Social Anthropology; a semester each in Rural Life; Urban Life; and Race, Culture and Population; Criminology; Principles of Sociology; and for the senior majors a course in American Society in preparation for the General Examination. Their content is designed to contribute to the realization that we are living in a kind of world in which change is rapid and normal, great personal insecurities are common and new values about group living make for a more dynamic approach to the conditions of life. "Man periodically, through culture, appraises the conditions of his existence and strives to control them."
